👁 8 ✓ 0 ★ 1

Chapter 1 by Jake

Wesley never intended on becoming an actor. It happened completely by accident. As a child, Wes Downey was shy, energetic, and successful at everything he tried. Athletics came easy to him and he got along well with his peers. The problem with Wes was that he was never really himself. Wesley was an image of everyone's expectations. He would mask his emotions to appear brave, manipulate his actions to make people happy, and had a terrible fear of disappointing those around him.

Without anyone realizing it, Wes' childhood was preparing him for an incredible acting career. His ability to make himself anyone he needed to be made him the ultimate character. The best stage actors paled in comparison to his talents, and Hollywood was just a joke. Wes Downey was too big for entertainment. His audience was the world, and his script was new every day.

Wes Downey, was a con man.
